PUBLISHER'S NOTE

We have much pleasure in presenting to our readers the fourth edition of the English translation of the Devī-māhātmyam or Durgā-Saptaśati popularly known as Caṇḍī. The original text has been printed in Devanāgarī type with a running, lucid English translation. Foot-notes have been added wherever necessary.

This is a valuable and important addition to our Sanskrit Scripture series. There has been a consistent demand from many a friend to publish the English translation of the above book. Swāmī Jagadīśvarānanda who had already rendered into Bengali different editions of the Gitā and Caṇḍī, has kindly translated it into English which has been revised by Dr. V. Raghavan, M.A., PH.D., and thoroughly edited by Swāmī Ādidevānanda. Our sincere thanks to them.

The Caṇḍī is divided into 13 chapters and consists of 700 mantras and hence it is called the Saptaśati. Three aspects of the Divine Mother have been depicted in the book and they are (1) Māhākālī (Chapter 1), (2) Mahālakṣmī (Chapters II to IV) and (3) Māhāsarasvatī (Chapters V to XIII), and meditation on each of them has been added with English translation. The whole of the Devī-māhātmyam is chanted on sacred occasions, especially during the Durgā-Pūjā (Navarātri).

For the sake of Pārāyaṇa (chanting the whole Māhātmyam of the Devī) we have added Dhyāna Ślokas (meditation on Caṇḍikā), Argalā-Stotra, Kilaka-Stotra and Devī-Kavaca (all salutations to Caṇḍikā) in the beginning and Aparādha-Kṣamāpaṇa-Stotra (hymn of forgiveness for omissions and wrong reading) and Devīsūkta at the end.

Those who intend to do the Pārāyaṇa are to chant the whole book from the beginning to the end.

We pray to the Divine Mother to shower Her blessings on those who will read this Māhātmyam with Sraddha.

SRI RAMAKRISHNA MATH,

PUBLISHER

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION

The Devī-māhātmyam, otherwise called the Durgāsaptasati or the Caṇḍī, is a sacred text used by the Hindus for daily chanting like the Gītā. My Bengali-rendering of the Devī-māhātmyam published by the Udbodhan Office of Calcutta, has already undergone several editions. Its popularity in Bengali has encouraged me to undertake the present English translation whose want has been, for long, keenly felt by the English-knowing public. This edition is meant for them.

I have freely utilized the translations of Manmathanath Dutta of Calcutta and F. E. Pargiter who have translated into English the whole of the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa of which the thirteen cantos from LXXXI to XCIII form the Devī-māhātmyam. Pargiter's translation was published in 1899 by the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal, Calcutta. I have differed from him, as well as from Dutta. A good Hindi rendering also has been consulted.

The translation made in this book is literal as far as practicable and, I hope, will help the reader to understand the original Sanskrit. The hymns to the Devī in the cantos I, IV, V, & XI are so sweet and sublime that they should, if possible, be chanted in the original. Foot-notes are given from the commentaries to clarify difficult terms and proper names.

To call on God as Mother is a most characteristic feature of Hinduism. Sri Ramakrishna has shown in his life that to adore God as Mother is the Sadhana best suited for this Kali age. Mother-worshippers like Rāmprasād, Kamalākānta and others also have inspired Bengal with this doctrine. Bengali Hindus are beside themselves with joy at the time of the autumnal festival of the Mother, when the Mother is worshipped continuously for four days in hundreds of earthen images. The Devi-māhātmyam is chanted as part of the worship. The Devi-cult and the Devi-māhātmyam are popular all over India but their hold over Bengal is unique.

Through the English works on and translations of the Tāntrika Texts of Sir John Woodroffe, and through the Life and Teachings of Sri Ramakrishna, the doctrine of God as Mother has spread throughout the religious world. My humble efforts will be amply rewarded if this translation enables the English-knowing readers to understand and enjoy the work which is one of the most important texts of this Cult.

I resort to Mahākālī, who has ten faces, ten legs and holds in her hands the sword, disc, mace, arrows, bow, club, spear, missile, human head and conch, who is three-eyed, adorned with ornaments on all her limbs, and luminous like a blue jewel, and whom Brahmā extolled in order to destroy Madhu and Kaiṭabha, when Viṣṇu was in (mystic) sleep.

1-3. Mārkaṇḍeya said (to his disciple Krasuṣṭuki Bhāguri): Sāvārṇi,¹ son of Sūrya, is called the eighth Manu.² Listen, while I describe in detail about his birth, how Sāvārṇi, illustrious son of Sūrya, became the lord of the (eighth) Manvantara by the grace of Mahāmāyā.³

1. Sāvārṇi was so called because he was the son of Savarṇā, Sūrya's wife. He became King Suratha in the second (Svārociṣa) manvantara.

2. One cycle of creation is divided into fourteen manvantaras. The period ruled over by one Manu is called a Manvantara. There are, therefore, fourteen Manus as follows: Svāyambhuva, Svārociṣa, Uttama, Tāmasa, Raivata, Cākṣuṣa, Vaivasvata, Sāvārṇi, Dakṣa-sāvārṇi, Brahma-sāvārṇi, Dharma-sāvārṇi, Rudra-sāvārṇi, Deva-sāvārṇi, and Indra-sāvārṇi.

3. One of the names of the Divine Mother.

4-5. In former times there was a king named Suratha, born of the Caitra⁴ dynasty, ruling over the whole world in the period of Svārociṣa. He protected his subjects duly like his own children. At that time the kings who were the destroyers of the Kolās⁵ became his enemies.

6-7. He, the wielder of powerful weapons, fought a battle with the destroyers of Kolās, but was defeated by them though they were a small force. Then he returned to his own city, and ruled over his own country. Then that illustrious king was attacked by those powerful enemies.

4. Caitra is said to be the first son of Svārociṣa.

5. The word Kolāvidhvamsinaḥ is variously explained by the commentators. Pargiter explains the word 'enemies in alliance with Kolās. Kolās may refer to the aboriginal race of Kolās, whose descendants are even now living in some parts of India'.

8-9. Even in his own city, the king, (now) bereft of strength, was robbed of his treasury and army by his own powerful, vicious and evil-disposed ministers. Thereafter, deprived of his sovereignty, the king left alone on horse-back for a dense forest, under the pretext of hunting.

10-11. He saw there the hermitage of Medhas—the supreme among the twice-born—inhabited by wild animals which were peaceful, and graced by the disciples of the sage. Entertained by the sage, Suratha spent some time moving about in the hermitage of the great sage.

12-16. There, then overcome with attachment, he began to think : 'I do not know whether the

Those who were my constant followers and received favour, riches and food from me, now certainly pay homage to other kings. The treasure which I gathered with great care will be squandered by those constant spend-thrifts, who are addicted to improper expenditures.'

17-19. The king was continually thinking of these and other things. Near the hermitage of the Brāhmaṇa he saw a merchant, and asked him: 'Ho! Who are you? What is the reason for your

My wife and sons have misappropriated my riches, and made me devoid of wealth. Cast out by my trusted kinsmen, I have come to the forest grief-stricken. 46-49. The R̥ṣi said: Sir, every being has the knowledge of objects perceivable by the senses. An object of sense reaches it in various ways. Some beings are blind by day, and others are blind by night; some beings have equal sight both by day and night. Human beings are certainly endowed with knowledge, but they are not the only beings (to be 50-58. The knowledge that men have, birds and beasts too have; and what they have, men also possess; and the rest (like eating and sleeping) is common to both of them. Look at these birds, which though they possess knowledge, and are themselves distressed by hunger, are yet, because of the delusion, engaged in dropping grains into the beaks of their young ones. Human beings are, O tiger among men, attached to their children because of greed for return help. Do you not see this? Even so men are hurled into the whirlpool of attachment, the pit of delusion, through the power of Mahāmāyā (the Great Illusion), who makes the existence of the world possible. Marvel not at this.

This Mahāmāyā is the Yoganidrā,⁷ of Viṣṇu, the Lord of the world. It is by her the world is deluded. Verily she, the Bhagavatī, Mahāmāyā forcibly drawing the minds of even the wise, throws them into delusion. She creates this entire universe, both moving and unmoving. It is she who, when propitious, becomes a boon-giver to human beings for their final liberation. She is the supreme knowledge, is the cause of final liberation, and is eternal; she is the cause of the bondage of transmigration and is the sovereign over all lords.

I resort to Mahālakṣmī, the destroyer of Mahiṣāsura, who is seated on the lotus, and is of the complexion of coral and holds in her (eighteen) hands the rosary, axe mace, arrow, thunderbolt, lotus, bow, pitcher, rod, śakti, sword, shield, conch, bell, wine-cup, trident, noose and the discus Sudraśana.

1-3. The R̥si said : Of yore when Mahiṣā-sura was the lord of asuras and Indra the lord of devas, there was a war between the devas and asuras for a full hundred years. In that the army of the devas was vanquished by the valorous asuras. After conquering all the devas, Mahiṣā-sura became the lord of heaven (Indra).

4-5. Then the vanquished devas headed by Brahmā, the lord of beings, went to the place where Śiva and Viṣṇu were. The devas described to them in detail, as it had happened, the story of their defeat wrought by Mahiṣā-sura.

Thrown out from heaven by that evil-natured Mahiṣa, the hosts of devas wander on the earth like mortals. All that has been done by the enemy of the devas, has been related to you both, and we have sought shelter under you both. May both of you be pleased to think out the means of his destruction.'

9. Having thus heard the words of the devas, Viṣṇu was angry and Śiva, too, and their faces became fierce with frowns.

10-11. Then issued forth a great light from the face of Viṣṇu who was full of intense anger, and from that of Brahmā and of Śiva too. From the bodies of Indra and other devas also sprang forth a very great light. And (all) this light united together.

12-13. The devas saw there a concentration of light like a mountain blazing excessively, pervading all the quarters with its flames. Then that unique light, produced from the bodies of all the devas, pervading the three worlds with its lustre, combined into one and became a female form.

14-15. By that which was Śiva's light, her face came into being; by Yama's (light) her hair,

By Brahmā's light her feet came into being ; by Sūrya's light her toes. by Vasus¹ (light) her fingers, by Kubera's (light) her nose ; by Prajapati's light her teeth came into being and similarly by Agni's light her three eyes were formed. The light of the two sandhyas became her eye-brows, the light of Vāyu, her ears ; the manifestation of the lights of other devas too (contributed to the being of the) auspicious Devī.

34-46. The earth quaked and all the mountains rocked. 'Victory to you,' exclaimed the devas in joy to her, the lion-rider. The sages, who bowed their bodies in devotion, extolled her. Seeing the three worlds² agitated, the foes of devas mobilized all their armies and rose together with uplifted weapons. Mahiṣāśura, exclaiming in wrath, 'Ha! What is this?' rushed towards that roar, surrounded by innumerable asuras. Then he saw the Devī pervading the three worlds with her lustre, making the earth bend with

Then began a battle between that Devī and the enemies of the devas, in which the quarters of the sky were illumined by the weapons and arms hurled diversely. Mahiṣāsura's general, a great asura named Cikṣura, and Cāmara, attended by other (asuras) and forces comprising four parts,³ fought.

A great asura named Udagra wsth sixty thousand chariots, and Mahāhanu with ten million (chariots) gave battle. Asiloman,⁴ another great asura, with fifty millions (of chariots), and Bāṣkala with six millions fought in that battle. Parivārita with many thousands of elephants and horses, and surrounded with ten millions of chariots, fought in that battle. An asura named Biḍāla fought in that battle surrounded with five hundred crores of chariots. And other great asuras, thousands in number, surrounded with chariots, elephants and horses fought with the Devī in that battle.

47-48. Mahiṣāsura was surrounded in that battle with thousands of crores of horses, elephants and chariots. Others (asuras) fought in the battle against the Devī with iron maces and javelins, with spears and clubs, with swords, axes and halberds. Some hurled spears and others nooses.

49-58. They began to strike her with swords in order to kill her. Showering her own weapons and arms, that Devī Caṇḍikā very easily cut to pieces all those weapons and arms. Without any strain on her face, and with the gods and sages extolling her, the Īsvari threw her weapons and arms at the bodies of the asuras. And the lion which carried the Devī, shaking its mane in rage, also stalked among the hosts of the asuras like a conflagration amidst the forests. The sighs which Ambikā, engaged in the battle, heaved became at once her battalions by hundreds and thousands. Energized by the power of the Devī, these (battalions) fought with axes, javelins, swords and halberds, and destroyed the asuras. Of these battalions, some beat drums, some blew conches and others played on tabors in that great martial festival. Then the Devī killed hundreds of asuras with her trident, club, showers of spears, swords and the like, and threw down others who were 59-61. Pierced in the breast by her trident, some fell on the ground. Pierced all over by her arrows, and resembling porcupines, some of the enemies of devas gave up their lives on that field of battle. Some had their arms cut off, some, their necks broken; the heads of others rolled down;

63. Headless trunks fought with the Devī with the best weapons in their hands. Some of these headless trunks danced there in the battle to the rhythm of the musical instruments.

64-65. The trunks of some other great asuras, with their swords, spears and lances still in their hands, shouted at the Devī with their heads just severed, 'Stop, stop'. That part of earth where the battle was fought became impassable with the 66-67. The profuse blood from the asuras, elephants and horses flowed immediately like large rivers amidst that army of the asuras. As fire consumes a huge heap of straw and wood, so did Ambikā destroy that vast army of asuras in no time.

68-69. And her carrier-lion, thundering aloud, with quivering mane, prowled about in the battlefield, [appearing to search out the vital breaths from the bodies of the enemies of devas. In that battlefield the battalions of the Devī fought in such a manner with the asuras that the devas in heaven, showering flowers, extolled them.

3. That asura rained showers of arrows on the Devī in the battle, even as a cloud (showers) rain on the summit of Mount Meru.

4. Then the Devī, easily cutting asunder the masses of his arrows, killed his horses and their controller with her arrows.

7. Swiftly he smote the lion on the head with his sharp-edged sword and struck the Devī also on her left arm.

8. O king, his sword broke into pieces as it touched her arm. Thereon, his eyes turning red with anger, he grasped his pike.

10. Seeing that pike coming upon her, the Devī hurled her pike, which shattered his pike into a hundred fragments and shattered the great asura himself.

11. Mahiṣāsura's very valiant general having been killed, Cāmara, the afflictor of devas, mounted on an elephant, advanced.

12. He also hurled his spear at the Devī. Ambikā quickly assailed it with a whoop, and made it lustreless and fall to the ground.

14. Then the lion, leaping up and seating itself at the centre of the elephant's forehead, engaged itself in a hand to hand fight with that foe of the devas.

15. Fighting, the two then came down to the earth from the back of the elephant, and fought very impetuously, dealing the most terrible blows at each other.

16. Then the lion, springing up quickly to the sky, and descending, severed Cāmara's head with a blow from its paw.

18. Enraged, the Devī ground Uddhata to powder with the blows of her club, and killed Bāṣkala with a dart and destroyed Tāmara and Andhaka with arrows.

19. The three-eyed Supreme Īsvarī killed Ugrāsya and Ugravīrya and Mahāhanu also with her trident.

20. With her sword she struck down Biḍāla's head from his body, and despatched both Durdhara and Durmukha to the abode of Death with her arrows.

29. She flung her noose over him and bound the great asura. Thus bound in the great battle, he quitted his buffalo form.

30. Then he became a lion suddenly. While Ambikā cut off the head (of his lion form), he took the appearance of a man with sword in hand.

31. Immediately then the Devī with her arrows chopped off the man together with his sword and shield. Then he became a big elephant.

32. (The elephant) tugged at her great lion with his trunk and roared loudly, but as he was dragging, the Devī cut off his trunk with her sword.

33. The great asura then resumed his buffalo shape and shook the three worlds with their movable and immovable objects.

34. Enraged thereat, Caṇḍikā, the Mother of the worlds, quaffed a divine drink again and again, and laughed, her eyes becoming red.

35. And the asura also roared, intoxicated with his strength and valour, and hurled mountains against Caṇḍikā with his horns.

36. And she with showers of arrows pulverized (those mountains) hurled at her, and spoke to him in flurried words, the colour of her face accentuated with the intoxication of the divine drink.

37-38. The Devī said : 'Roar, roar, O fool, for a moment while I drink this wine.³ When you are slain by me, the devas will soon roar in this very place.'

39-40. The Ṛṣī said : Having exclaimed thus, she jumped and landed herself on that great asura, pressed him on the neck with her foot and struck him with her spear.

41. And thereupon, caught up under her foot, Mahiṣāsura half issued forth (in his real form) from his own (buffalo) mouth, being completely overcome by the valour of the Devī.

3. According to the commentary named Guptavati, the drinking of divine wine signifies that the Devī was in her Mahālakṣmi form

42. Fighting thus with his half-revealed form, the great asura was laid by the Devī who struck off his head with her great sword.

43. Then, crying in consternation, the whole asura army perished ; and all the hosts of devas were in great exultation.

44. With the great sages of heaven, the devas praised the Devī. The Gandharva chiefs sang and the bebies of apsaras danced.

MEDITATION ON MAHĀSARASWATĪ

I meditate on the incomparable Mahāsaraswati who holds in her (eight) lotus-like hands bell, trident, plough, conch, mace, discus, bow and arrow; who is effulgent like the moon shining at the fringe of a cloud, who is the destroyer of Śumbha and other asuras, who issued forth from Pārvati's body and is the substratum of the three worlds.

4. They themselves exercised Vāyu's authority and Agni's duty. Deprived of their lordships and sovereignties, the devas were defeated.

1. According to the Vāmana-Purāṇa, Śumbha and Niśumbha were born of Kaśyapa and his wife Dhanu.

85. She, the lovely-browed, asked those devas, 'Who is praised by you here?' And an auspicious goddess, who sprang forth from her physical sheath, gave the reply;

86. 'This hymn is addressed to me by the assembled devas set at naught by the asura Śumbha and routed in battle by Niśumbha.'

87. Because that Ambikā came out of Pārvatī's physical sheath (Kośa), she is glorified as Kauśikī in all the worlds.

5. Thereupon Ambikā became terribly angry with those foes, and in her anger her countenance then became dark as ink.

6. Out from the surface of her forehead, fierce with frown, issued suddenly Kālī of terrible countenance, armed with a sword and noose.

7-9. Bearing the strange skull-topped staff, decorated with a garland of skulls, clad in a tiger's skin, very appalling owing to her emaciated flesh, with gaping mouth, fearful with her tongue lolling out, having deep-sunk reddish eyes and filling the regions of the sky with her roars, and impetuously falling upon and slaughtering the great asuras in that army, she devoured those hosts of the foes of the devas.

10. Snatching the elephants with one hand she flung them into her mouth together with their rear men and drivers and their warrior-riders and bells.

11. Taking likewise into her mouth the cavalry with the horses, and chariot with its driver, she ground them most frightfully with her teeth.

12. She seized one by the hair and another by the neck; one she crushed by the weight of her foot, and another by that of her body.

13. And she caught with her mouth the weapons and the great arms shot by those asuras and crunched them up with her teeth in her fury.

14. She destroyed all that host of mighty and evil-natured asuras, devoured some, and battered others.

15. Some were killed with her sword, some were beaten with her skull-topped staff, and other asuras met their death being ground with the edge of her teeth.

16. On seeing all the hosts of asuras laid low in a moment, Caṇḍa rushed against that Kālī, who was exceedingly terrible.

17. The great asura (Caṇḍa) with very terrible showers of arrows, and Muṇḍa with discuses hurled in thousands, covered that terrible-eyed (Devī).

18. Those numerous discuses, disappearing into her mouth, looked like numerous solar orbs disappearing into the midst of a cloud.

19. Thereat Kālī, who was roaring frightfully, whose fearful teeth were gleaming within her dreadful mouth, laughed terribly with exceeding fury.

20. Then the Devī, mounting upon her great lion, rushed at Caṇḍa, and seizing him by his hair, severed his head with her sword.

22. Seeing the most valiant Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa laid low, the remaining army there became panicky and fled in all directions.

23. And Kālī, holding the heads of Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa in her hands, approached Caṇḍikā and said, her words mingled with very loud laughter :

24. 'Here have I brought you the heads of Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa as two great animal offerings in this sacrifice of battle ; Śumbha and Niśumbha, you shall yourself slay.

25-27. The Rṣi said: Thereupon, seeing those asuras, Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa, brought to her, the auspicious, Caṇḍikā said to Kālī these playful words: 'Because you have brought me both Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa, you, O Devī, shall be famous in the world by the name Cāmuṇḍā.'

Here ends the seventh chapter called 'The Slaying of Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa' of Devī-māhātmya in Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa, during the period of Sāvartī, the Manu.

1-3. The Ṛṣi said : After the daitya Caṇḍa was slain and Muṇḍa was laid low, and many of the battalions were destroyed, the lord of the asuras, powerful Śumbha, with mind overcome by anger, commanded then the mobilization of all the daitya hosts :

4. ' Now let the eighty-six asuras—upraising their weapons—with all their forces, and the eighty-four Kambus,¹ surrounded by their own forces, go out.

5. 'Let the fifty asura families of Koṭivīryas² and the hundred families of Dhaumras³ go forth at my command.

6. 'Let the asuras⁴ Kālakas, Daurhṛdas, the Mauryas and the Kālikeyas hasten at my command and march forth ready for battle.'

7. After issuing these orders, Śumbha, the lord of the asuras and a ferocious ruler, went forth attended by many thousands of big forces.

8. Seeing that most terrible army coming, Caṇḍikā filled the space between the earth and the sky with the twang of her bow-string.

2 & 3. Koṭivīrya and Dhaumra (descendants of Dhumra) are families of asuras.

4. Kālakas etc., are the names of the families of asuras.

9. Thereon her lion made an exceedingly loud roar, O King, and Ambikā magnified those roars with the clanging of her bell.

10. Kālī, expanding her mouth wide and filling the quarters with the sound (hum) overwhelmed the noises of the bow-string, lion, and bell by her terrific roars.

11. On hearing that roar the enraged asura battalions surrounded the lion, the Devī (Caṇḍikā), and Kālī on all the four sides.

12-13. At this moment, O King, in order to annihilate the enemies of devas and for the well-being of the supreme devas, there issued forth, endowed with exceeding vigour and strength, Saktis⁵ from the bodies of Brahma, Śiva, Guha⁶, Viṣṇu and Indra, and with the forms of those devas went to Caṇḍikā.

14. Whatever was the form of each deva, and whatever his ornaments and vehicle, in that very manner his śakti advanced to fight with the asuras.

15. In a heavenly chariot drawn by swans advanced Brahma's śakti carrying a rosary and a Kamaṇḍalu. She is called Brahmāṇī.

5. Saktis are the embodied forms of the powers of the respective devas.

6. Kumāra or Kārtikeya.

17. Ambikā Kaumārī in the form of Guha, holding a spear in hand and riding on a fine peacock, advanced to attack the asuras.

18. Likewise, the Śakti of Viṣṇu came, seated on Garuḍa, holding conch, discus, mace and bow in hand.

19. The Śakti of Hari, who assumed the incomparable form of a sacrificial boar, she also advanced there in a boar-like form.

20. Nārasimhī⁷ arrived there, assuming a body like that of Narasimha, bringing down the constellations by the toss of her mane.

21. Likewise, the thousand-eyed Aindrī,⁸ holding a thunderbolt in hand and riding on the lord of elephants, arrived just like Śakra (Indra).

22. Then Śiva, surrounded by those śaktis of the devas, said to Caṇḍikā, 'Let the asuras be killed forthwith by you for my gratification.'

23. Thereupon from the body of Devī, issued forth the Śakti of Caṇḍikā, most terrific, exceedingly fierce and yelling like a hundred jackals.

7. Śakti of Viṣṇu in his incarnation as Man-Lion.

8. Śakti of Indra, Lord of the gods.

25. 'Tell the two haughty asuras, Śumbha and Niśumbha, and the other asuras assembled there for battle.

26. "Let Indra obtain the three worlds and let the devas enjoy the sacrificial oblations. You go to the nether world, if you wish to live.

27. "But if through pride of strength you are anxious for battle, come on then. Let my jackals be satiated with your flesh."

28. Because that Devī appointed Śiva himself as ambassador, thenceforth she became renowned in this world as Śiva-dūti.⁹

29. Those great asuras, on their part, hearing the words of the Devī, communicated by Śiva, were filled with indignation and went where Kātyāyani¹⁰ stood.

30. Then in the very beginning, the enraged foes of the devas poured in front on the Devī showers of arrows, javelins and swords.

31. And playfully, with the huge arrows shot from her full-drawn bow, she clove those arrows, spears, darts and axes hurled by them.

9. Literally one for whom Śiva is Dūta (ambassador).

10. A name of Gaṇḍikā.

32. Then, in front of him, (Śumbha), stalked Kālī, piercing the enemies to pieces with her spear and crushing them with her skull-topped staff.

33. And Brahmāṇī, wherever she moved, made the enemies bereft of valour and prowess by sprinkling on them the water from her Kamaṇḍalu:

34. Māheśvarī slew the daityas with her trident, Vaiṣṇavī with her discus and the very wrathful Kaumārī with her javelin.

35. Torn to pieces by the thunderbolt which came down upon them hurled by Aindrī, daityas and dānavas fell on the earth in hundreds, streams of blood flowing out of them.

37. Nārāsīmḥī, filling all the quarters and the sky with her roars, roamed about in the battle, devouring other great asuras torn by her claws.

38. Dazed by the violent laughter of Śiva-dūti, the asuras fell down on the earth; she then devoured those who had fallen down.

39. Seeing the enraged band of Mātṛs crushing the great asuras thus by various means, the troops of the enemies of devas took to their heels.

40. Seeing the asuras harassed by the band of Mātṛs and fleeing, the great asura Raktabīja strode forward to fight in wrath.

41. Whenever from his body there fell to the ground a drop of blood, at that moment rose up from the earth an asura of his stature.

42. The great asura fought with Indra's śakti with club in his hand; then Aindrī struck Raktabīja with her thunderbolt.

43. Blood flowed quickly and profusely from him who was wounded by the thunderbolt. From the blood rose up (fresh) combatants of his form and valour.

45. And those persons also who sprang up from his blood, fought there with the Mātṛs in a more dreadful manner hurling very formidable weapons.

46. And again, when his head was wounded by the fall of her thunderbolt, his blood flowed and therefrom were born persons in thousands.

47. Vaiṣṇavī struck him with her discus in the battle, and Aindrī beat that lord of asuras with her club.

48. The world was pervaded by thousands of great asuras who were of his stature and who rose up from the blood that flowed from him when he was cloven by the discus of Vaiṣṇavī.

49. Kaumārī struck the great asura Raktabīja with her spear, Vārāhī with her sword, and Māheśvarī with her trident.

50. And Raktabīja, the great asura also, filled with wrath, struck every one of the Mātṛs severally with his club.

51. From the stream of blood which fell on the earth from him when he received multiple wounds by the spears, darts and other weapons, hundreds of asuras came into being.

52. And those asuras that were born from the blood of Raktabīja pervaded the whole world; the devas got intensely alarmed at this.

53-54. Seeing the devas dejected, Caṇḍikā laughed and said to Kālī, 'O Cāmuṇḍā, open out your mouth wide; with this mouth quickly take in the drops of blood generated by the blow of my weapon and (also) the great asuras born of the drops of blood of Raktabīja.

55. 'Roam about in the battle-field, devouring the great asuras that spring from him. So shall this daitya, with his blood exhausted, perish.

56. 'As you go on devouring these, other fierce (asuras) will not be born.' Having enjoined her thus, the Devi next smote him (Raktabīja) with her dart.

57. Then Kālī drank Raktabīja's blood with her mouth. Then and there he struck Gaṇḍikā with his club.

58-60. The blow of his club caused her not even the slightest pain. And from his stricken body wherever blood flowed copiously, there Cāmuṇḍā swallowed it with her mouth. Then Cāmuṇḍā devoured those great asuras who sprang up from the flow of blood in her mouth, and drank his (Raktabīja's) blood.

61. The Devī (Kauśikī) smote Raktabīja with her dart, thunderbolt, arrows, swords and spears, when Cāmuṇḍa went on drinking his blood.

62. Stricken with a multitude of weapons and bloodless, the great asura (Raktabīja) fell on the ground, O King.

63. Thereupon the devas attained great joy, O King. The band of Mātṛs who sprang from them danced, being intoxicated with blood.

Here ends the eighth chapter called 'The Slaying of Raktabīja' of Devī-Māhātmya in Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa during the period of Sāvārṇi, the Manu.

3. 'I wish to hear further what the very irate Sumbha and Niśumbha did after Raktabīja was killed.'

4-5. The Ṛṣi said : After Raktabīja was slain and other asuras were killed in the fight, the asuras Sumbha and Niśumbha gave way to unbounded wrath.

7. In front of him, behind him and on both sides of him, great asuras, enraged and biting their lips, advanced to slay the Devī.

8. Sumbha also, mighty in valour, went forward, surrounded with his own troops to slay Caṇḍikā in his rage, after fighting with the Mātr̥s.

9. Then commenced severe combat between the Devī on one side, and on the other, Sumbha and Niśumbha who, like two thunder-clouds, rained a most tempestuous shower of arrows on her.

10. Caṇḍikā with numerous arrows quickly split the arrows shot by the two asuras and smote the two lords of asuras on their limbs with her mass of weapons.

11. Niśumbha, grasping a sharp sword and a shining shield, struck the lion, the great carrier of the Devi, on the head.

12. When her carrier was struck, the Devi quickly cut Niśumbha's superb sword with a sharp-edged arrow and also his shield on which eight moons were figured.

13. When his shield was split and his sword too broken, the asura hurled his spear; and that missile also, as it advanced towards her, was split into two by her discus.

14. Then the dānav? Niśumbha, swelling with wrath, seized a dart; and that also, as it came, the Devī powdered with a blow of her fist.

15. Then brandishing his club, he flung it against Caṇḍikā; cleft by the trident of the Devī it also turned to ashes.

16. Then the Devī assailed with a flood of arrows the heroic dānava advancing with battle-axe in hand, and laid him low on the ground.

17. When his brother Niśumbha of terrific prowess fell to the ground, (Śumbha) got infuriated in the extreme. and strode forward to slay Ambikā.

18. Standing in his chariot and grasping excellent weapons in his long and incomparable eight arms, he shone, pervading the entire sky.

19. Seeing him approaching, the Devi blew her conch, and made a twang of her bow-string, which was unbearable in the extreme.

20. And (the Devi) filled all the directions with the ringing of her bell, which destroys the strength of all the daitya hosts.

21. The lion filled the heaven, the earth and the ten quarters of the sky with loud roars, which made the elephants give up their violent rut.

22. Then Kalī, springing upwards in the sky, (came down) and struck the earth with both her hands; by its noise all the previous sounds were drowned.

23. Sivadūti made a loud ominous peal of laughter. The asuras were frightened by those sounds, and Śumbha flew into an utmost rage.

24. As Ambikā said, 'O evil-natured one, stop, stop', the devas stationed in the sky cheered her with the words, 'Be victorious.'

25. The spear, which was flaming most terribly and shining like a mass of fire, which the approaching Śumbha hurled, was, as it was coming along, put out by a great fire-brand (from the Devī).

26. The interspace between the three worlds was pervaded by Sumbha's lion-like roar, but the dreadful thunder-clap (of the Devi) smothered that, O King.

27. The Devi split the arrows shot by Sumbha, and Sumbha also split the arrows discharged by her. Thus each cut (with her or his) sharp arrows in hundreds and thousands.

28. Then Caṇḍikā became angry and smote him with a trident. Wounded therewith, he fainted and fell to the ground.

29. Then Niśumbha, regaining consciousness, seized his bow and struck with arrows the Devi and Kālī and the lion.

30. And the danuja-lord, the son of Diti, putting forth a myriad arms, covered Caṇḍikā with myriad discuses.

31. Then Bhagavatī Durgā, the destroyer of difficulties and afflictions, became angry and split those discuses and those arrows with her own arrows.

32. Thereupon Niśumbha, surrounded by the daitya host, swiftly seizing his club, rushed at Caṇḍikā to slay her.

33. As he was just rushing at her, Caṇḍikā clove his club with her sharp-edged sword; and he took hold of a dart.

36. Then the Devī, laughing aloud, severed the head of him, who issued forth, with her sword. Thereupon he fell to the ground.

37. The lion then devoured those asuras whose necks he had crushed with his fierce teeth, and Kālī and Śivadūti devoured others.

38. Some great asuras perished, being pierced through by the spear of Kaumārī. Others were

39. Others fell, pierced by the trident wielded by Māheśvarī; some were powdered on to the ground by the blows from the snout of Vārāhī.

40. Some dānavas were cut to pieces by the discus of Vaiṣṇavī, and others again by the thunderbolt discharged from the palm of Aindrī.

41. Some asuras perished (themselves), some fled from the great battle, and others were devoured by Kālī, Śivadūtī and the lion.

Here ends the ninth chapter called 'The Slaying of Niśumbha' of Devī-māhātmya in Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa during the period of Sāvartī, the Manu.

1-3. The Ṛṣi said: Seeing his brother Niśumbha who was dear to him as his life, slain, and his army being slaughtered, Śumbha angrily said, 'O Durgā, you are puffed up with the pride of strength, don't show your pride (here). Though you are exceedingly haughty, you fight resorting to the strength of others.'

4-5. The Devī said: 'I am all alone in the world here. Who else is there besides me? See,

6. Then all those goddesses, Brahmāṇī and the rest, were absorbed in the body of the Devī. Ambikā alone then remained.

7-8. The Devī said : 'The numerous forms which I projected by my power here—those have been withdrawn by me, and (now) I stand alone. Be steadfast in combat.'

9-10. The Ṛṣi said : Then began a dreadful battle between them both, the Devī and Śumbha, while all the devas and asuras looked on.

11. With showers of arrows, with sharp weapons and with frightful missiles, the two engaged each other again in a combat that frightened all the worlds.

12. Then the lord of daityas broke all the divine missiles, which Ambikā discharged in hundreds, with (weapons) that repulsed them.

13. With fierce shout of hum and the like, the Parameśvarī playfully broke those excellent missiles that he discharged.

14. Then the asura covered the Devī with hundreds of arrows, and the Devī in wrath broke his bow with her arrows.

15. And when the bow was broken, the lord of the daityas took up his spear. The Devī split that (spear) also in his hand, with a discus:

16. Next the supreme monarch of the daityas, taking his sword bright like the sun and the shield bearing the images of a hundred moons, rushed at the Devī at that moment.

17. Just as he was rushing forward, Caṇḍikā split his sword with sharp arrows shot from her bow, as also his shield, spotless like the solar rays.

18. With his steeds slain, with his bow broken, and without a charioteer, the daitya then seized his terrible mace, trying to kill Ambikā.

19. With her sharp arrows, she split the mace of Sumbha, who was rushing at her. Even then, raising his fist, he rushed swiftly at her.

20. The daitya-lord brought his fist down on the heart of the Devī, and the Devī also with her palm smote him on his chest.

21. The daitya-king, wounded by the blow of her palm, fell on the earth, but immediately he rose up again.

22. Seizing the Devī, he sprang up and jumped into the sky. There also Caṇḍikā, fought with him without any support.

23. Then the daitya (Śumbha) and Caṇḍikā fought, as never before, with each other in the sky in a close combat, causing wonder to the Siddhas¹ and sages.

24. Ambikā then, after carrying on a close fight with him for a very long time, lifted him up, whirled him around, and flung him down on the earth.

25. Flung thus, the evil-natured (Śumbha), reaching the earth and raising his fist, hastily rushed forward desiring to kill Caṇḍikā.

26. Then the Devī, seeing that Lord of all the daitya-folk approaching her, felled him down on the earth, piercing him in the chest with her spear.

28. When that evil-natured (asura) was slain, the universe became happy and regained perfect peace, and the sky grew clear.

29. Flaming portent-clouds that were in evidence before became tranquil, and the rivers kept within their courses when (Sumbha) was thus stricken down.

30. When he had been slain, the minds of all the hosts of devas became overjoyed, and the Gandharvas² sang sweetly.

Through my power, lions, etc., robbers and enemies, flee from a distance from him who remembers this story of mine.

31-32. The Ṛṣi said : Having spoken thus the adorable Caṇḍikā, fierce in prowess, vanished on that very spot even as the devas were gazing at her.

33. Their foes having been killed, all the devas also were delivered from fear ; all of them resumed their own duties as before and participated in their shares of sacrifices.

34-35. When the exceedingly valorous Śumbha the most fierce foes of the devas, and the afflictor of the world, as well as the great fierce Niśumbha who was unparalleled in prowess, had been slain by the Devī, in battle, the remaining daityas entered Pātāla.

36. Thus, O King, the adorable Devī, although eternal, incarnating again and again, protects the world.

37. By her this universe, is deluded and it is she who creates this universe. And when entreated she bestows supreme knowledge and when propitiated, she bestows prosperity.

38. O King, by her, the Māhākālī, who takes the form of the great destroyer at the end of time, all this cosmic sphere is pervaded.

39. She indeed takes the form of the great destroyer at the (proper) time. She, the unborn, indeed becomes this creation (at the appropriate time for re-creation), she herself, the eternal Being, sustains the beings at (another) time.

40. In times of prosperity, she indeed is Lakṣmī, who bestows prosperity, in the homes of men; and in times of misfortune, she herself becomes the goddess of misfortune, and brings about ruin.

41. When praised and worshipped with flowers, incense, perfumes, etc., she bestows wealth, sons, and a mind bent on righteousness, and a prosperous life.

Here ends the twelfth chapter called 'Eulogy of the Merits' of Devi-Māhātmya in Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa during the period of Sāvārṇi, the Manu.

1-2. The R̥ṣi said : I have now narrated to you, O King, this sublime poem [on the glory of the Devi.

3. The Devi is endowed with such majestic power. By her this world is upheld. Knowledge is similarly conferred by her, the illusive power of Bhagavān Viṣṇu.

4. By her, you, this merchant, and other men of discrimination, are being deluded; and others were deluded (in the past), and will be deluded (in the future).

5. O great King, take refuge in her, the supreme Ísvari. She, indeed, when worshipped bestows on men enjoyment, heaven and final release (from transmigration).

6-8. Mārkaṇḍeya said (to his disciple Bhāguri): O great Sage, having heard this speech King Suratha who had become despondent consequent on his excessive attachment to and the deprivation of his kingdom, and also the merchant, prostrated before the illustrious Ṛṣi of severe penances and immediately repaired to perform austerity.

9. Both the king and the merchant, in order to obtain a vision of Ambā stationed themselves on the sand-bank of a river and practised penances chanting the supreme Devī-sūkta (hymn to the Devī).

11. Now abstaining from food, and now restraining in their food with their minds on her and with concentration, they both offered sacrifices sprinkled with blood drawn from their own bodies.

12. When they, with controlled minds, propitiated her thus for three years, Caṇḍikā, the upholder of the world, was well pleased, appeared before them and spoke.

13-15. The Devī said: 'Whatever you solicit, O King, and you, the delight of your family, receive all those from me. Well-pleased, I bestow those on you both.'

28-29. Having thus gained the boon from the Devī, Suratha, the foremost of Kṣatriyas, shall obtain a new birth through Sūrya (and of his wife Savarṇā), and shall be the Manu (eighth) named Sāvarṇi, shall be the Manu named Sāvarṇi.¹

Here ends the thirteenth chapter called 'The bestowing of boons to Suratha and Vaiśya' of Devi-Māhātmya in Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa during the period of Sāvarṇi, the Manu.

Here ends the Devi-Māhātmyam of 700 Mantras.
